But Little Infighting.

The bout was unusual in that there was but little or no infighting, and neither Griffiths nor Lewis cared to batter the other's midsection, being content to slam away at their jaws and face. Griffiths depended upon his left hand to subdue Lewis, while the champion brought both rights and lefts into play in the conduct of his offensive. Lewis showed that he possessed a kick in both hands in every round, while Griffiths displayed the fact that his left hand was his one best bet. The first round was even, with the customary feel-out, and the boys merely shot over a few taps by way of getting under headway. In the second of this round, Lewis staggered Griffiths with a fusiliade of lefts and rights, but Griffiths was unburt and came out of the barrage fighting with both hands. Griffiths was unburt and came out of the barrage fighting with both hands. Griffiths was unburd and evened the round by sending over a terrific left that shock the champion from shoe-soles to appetite. Griffiths led with his left, but Lewis made him miss. They were in a clinoh at the bell. The round was even.

Lewis countered with a fight on Griffiths' jaw. For the first time during the bout Lewis went after Griffiths' wind and sunk his right into Griffiths' stomach. Griffiths came back with a couple of stiff left hooks which stung Lewis. The round was about even with little to choose.

Griffiths Has the Fourth.

The fourth round was one of the fastest of the entire fight, with the Akron boy taking the offensive and giving Lewis a big assignment in keeping from going down. Griffiths opened with a couple of terrific lefts to the jaw which rocked Lewis left to the jaw and followed it up with a series of jabs to Lewis' head. Lewis did nothing in the way of offensive work in this session and it was clearly Griffiths' round. Apparently determined to even up matters, Lewis came out of his corner at the beginning of the fifth with blood in his eye, and he swept Griffiths almost off his feet by a whirlwind of wallops from both paws. Lewis sent in a couple of lefts and Griffiths returned with a weak jab to the face. They clinched and did some close-range milling with no damage resulting Fell.

Waish insists that Pal is the greater drawing card and is entitled to more money than Herman. Waish has asked Haack for $1,500 as Pal's part of the receipts, but Haack has demurred, and it is with the object in view of making some sort of compromise that today's conference is being held.

Milwaukee, Wis. is making strenuous efforts to secure the Moore-Herman bout, having offered $10,000 for it. Memphis has already made plans for it, and if Waish can be satisfied with Haack's terms and will place his signature to the articles, the Biuff City will see the two premier bantams in action on March 24.

specifively, that Pete Herman would be obliged to come in at 120 pounds or Pal would not be permitted to fight him.

"I met Herman in Cleveland the other day and he told me be was coming to Memphis to fight my bantamweight," said Walsh. "I asked him what weight, he was going to make for Pal." On catchweights, he resilled.

"I am very frank to say that if Palmet Herman at catchweights, Herman would undoubtedly beat him. Herman is a near festherweight and is a much bigger boy than Pal, who will come in at about 115 pounds. That is the reason we are going to insist that Herman will be if he is yould be seriously handicapped if he was obliged to take on a feather weight like Herman will be if he is permitted to come in at catchweights.

"Pal has before him a return bout with Jimmy Wilde, the British flyweight, which will net the boy $11,000. If Pal comes to Memphis and gets shaded by Herman, it will hurt his London battle, for those Englishmen keep in close touch with Pal's ring battles over here, and he would not be able to command so much money if he lost to Herman, which he undoubtedly would do if Herman is allowed to come in at catchweights.

"I know Memphians have Fal's best interests at heart, for he is their idol and they do not care to see him beaten. They can see the fairness in what I say when I state that Herman must make 129 pounds ringside for Moore before I will let him fight. I am Pal's representative and am taking the best possible cars of his interests, and if I permitted him to enter the ring with a featherweight and then he was defeated, then I would be dilatory in my duty roward Pal.

"If Herman makes 120 ringside and we get a little more money than Herman, Pal will fight Herman here March."

Charles Harvey, Ted Lewis' manager, former boxing commissioner in New York city, who has been in boxing for many years and who is an authority on the subject, picks Jess Willard to defeat Jack Dempsey when they meet on July 4.

"That big stiff Willard, though I'd like to see Dempsey knock him dead, will defeat Dempsey. I've seen both of them fight and have watched Willard since he first started fighting. He has the bulk and he'll wear Dempsey down until he will be so tired he couldn't knock a feather down. Then Willard will apply the haymaker and another

"I saw Willard when he met Frank Moran, one of the gamest boys that ever donned a glove. Willard toyed with Moran as a man would toy with a child. Moran was a high-class fighting machine and he didn't have a chance against Jess. Dempsey will never be able to make Willard wince. I hope he knocks his brains out, for Willard is able to make Willard wince. I hope no knocks his brains out, for Willard is the most despicable man that ever had anything to do with the boxing game, but my judgment is that Willard will win July 4," concluded Harvey.

Frankle Burns, the Jersey City bantam, has been noising it abroad that he is anxious to meet Pal Moore, but that Pal is afraid of him. He wrote Billy Hasek, of the Southern Athletic club, stating that he wanted to meet Pal, but that he couldn't drag Pal into the ring with him.

Hasek got busy and Pal sgreed to meet Burns. Then Burns wrote Hasek and said he couldn't meet Pal in Memphis, because it wouldn't draw. Frankle hasn't challenged Pal any more.
